

Documentary Screening:
THE OYSTERING LIFE

The Oystering Life is a feature-length video documentary by director Steve Hamm and editor Scott N. Amore that tells the story of Oystering along the Connecticut Coast, from the early days of native Americans and European settlers, through years when oysters were in abundance, its collapse in the early 20th century, to oyster's remarkable revival today.

This is a free event presented by the Branford Historical Society and the Branford Arts & Cultural Alliance.
